

PRESS RELEASE

Case of listeriosis in connection with the consumption of cheeses manufactured by the Société Fromagère de la Brie

Since Public Health France has identified cases of Listeria infection of people who have consumed cheese manufactured by the Société de Fromagère de la Brie, the health authorities of the Ministries in charge of health and food in connection with the companies are mobilized to take all necessary measures to protect consumers.

Following the traceability survey that has just been conducted, it was decided as a precautionary measure to withdraw from the market and to recall all the raw milk and pasteurized milk cheeses manufactured by the Société Fromagère de la Brie at its site of St Siméon (FR 77 432 001 EC and FR 77 436 001 EC). Some of these products have been refined and processed by other companies, they are also withdrawn from the market and recalled.

Epidemiological, environmental and food traceability investigations are on going to clarify the origin of the contamination.

The creams and cheeses concerned were marketed until 09/04/2019 in different national brands and in retail stores. In case of doubt, consumers are advised not to eat the products and to check with their usual supplier. Retailers that have distributed these products are required to inform their customers. In particular, posters will be apposed in the relevant sales outlets.

People who own the creams and cheeses concerned should not eat them and are invited to bring them back to the point of sale where they bought them. People who eaten it and who have fever, isolated or accompanied by headaches, and aches are invited to consult their doctor by reporting this consumption. Severe forms with neurological complications and maternal or fetal impairment in pregnant women may also occasionally occur. Pregnant women as well as immuno-depressed persons and the old people should be particularly attentive to these symptoms. Listeriosis is a potentially serious disease with an incubation time of up to eight weeks.
